

Welcome to Green Field College Of Vocational Studies, Ashta

Welcome to Green Field College. Green Field College is a registered independent college and a full member of the Green Field Vocational Studies College Fellowship. We hope this handbook will help you find your feet.

It is important to us that you are kept fully informed about both the schools day-to-day routines, rules and expectations and its management and governance. Hopefully this handbook and the school website fulfill this aim. Please let us know if we have made any omissions so that these may be addressed in future drafts and do please bring any questions to us as soon as they arise - further details of how to contact members of staff can be found in the Communications policy available at reception and on the College website.

The main text should give you all the general information you need, while the appendices should help you with more detailed questions.

Before we look at college life today and at the future of our college in a world that presents our students with unprecedented challenges, we recognise that the College as you see it today with its student groups, under graduate and post graduate courses would not have been possible without the support and commitment of parents and friends.

Until this building was acquired in 2002, Green Field College in Ashta, Sehore, MP, India had existed only in rented halls and port-a-cabins: finding suitable premises that were in any way affordable seemed impossible. Green Field College was derelict when we took it on and all that exists today is testament to the voluntary labour and love of parents and friends who have worked alongside and supported the College staff throughout this journey.

While the challenges and opportunities the school faces today are different to those of the early days more is asked of parents than is required in mainstream education because the lifeblood of the college remains the commitment of parents:

- commitment to support the educational principles at home
- commitment to support fund raising activity
- commitment to pay the fees

Thus the future of the college lies in the hands of the parents, teachers and friends of the college today.
